Victory Celebration Planned for Hope Team Monday Night

Conference Title Holders Will Be Honored By Band

Homecoming Planned for Hope-Prescott Battle

2 GAME SCHEDULED

Bobcats Win Sensational Game From Beebe, 43 to 39

A homecoming and victory celebration is planned for the Hope High School basketball team, Arkansas conference champions, here Monday night.

The High School band will beat the "victory drums" for the Bobcats at a double-header basketball contest between Hope and Prescott teams at the high school gymnasium.

The Juniors will meet the Prescott Juniors at 6:45 and the Hope and Prescott senior teams clash at 7:30 o'clock. The high school band plans to stage some "stunts" between halves.

Clinches Title

The Hope High School team clinched the Arkansas conference championship Friday night when North Little Rock knocked off Jonesboro, 36 to 28, at Jonesboro. Had Jonesboro beaten the Wildcats and then went on to win their remaining conference games the Hurricane team would have tied Hope for the title.

The Bobcats wound up their conference play last week, winning 10 games and losing two.

Wolves Dangerous

The Prescott team this season is enjoying its best season in recent years, having won 29 games, including victories over North Little Rock, Warren and Camden.

Hope opened the season with Prescott and won by two points, and the Wolves will be seeking vengeance when they appear here Monday night.

Coach Fay Hammons said he was expecting the largest crowd of the season for the homecoming and victory celebration, including a large delegation of Prescott fans.

Supporters of the Bobcats are urged to turn out in large numbers for this occasion.

Win Over Beebe

LITTLE ROCK — In the most spectacular basketball played in Little Rock this season, the Hope Bobcats defeated the Beebe Badgers, 43 to 39, at the Joseph T. Robinson Memorial auditorium Friday night. It was a rapid-fire roundelay of points as a crowd estimated at 600 marveled at the performance of the state's two outstanding high school teams.

The lead in the sizzling fracas changed nine times. The score was tied on seven occasions. The advantage shifted three times in the second quarter, four times in the third and twice in the fourth. The score was tied three times in the first quarter, twice in the second, none in the third and twice in the fourth.

Beebe led until the midway in the second quarter and lost the advantage when J. D. Jones tossed in a goal to give Hope a 17-to-16 majority. From then on, it was a maddening saw-saw with each side beginning to prevail for a break. The game seemed that evenly matched. The Badgers

Honeymoon Isle Off Coast of Florida Is Newest Promotion

It was "Hog Island" when millionaire C. M. Washburn sat there. Later, in New York, he "got to thinking."

"Honeymoon Island" . . . "a proud jewel in the green, glistening waters of the Gulf."

Desert Island in Gulf Converted to "Paradise"

IT IS ALL FREE

Guests Need Only Transportation and Food

By NEA Service

TAMPA, Fla. — Fifty newlywed couples will get dream-drawn honeymoons on a tropical island off the Gulf coast of Florida on March 8.

And that's only the beginning. After the first two weeks there'll be 50 more. By September, over 500 couples from all parts of the country will have made a mass honeymoon invasion of the island.

Right now, workers on the island are rushing to complete the 30 palm thatched cottages that will house the honeymooners. Rowboats are being built, one for each couple. Preparations are being made to welcome each couple, transport them to the island, and leave them on the desert isle alone . . . that is, except for 49 other couples who will also be "alone."

How "Hog" Became "Honey" Island

Some years ago C. M. Washburn, real estate millionaire, acquired Hog Island, three miles off the Florida west coast, not far from Tampa. Uninhabited, the island perched like a proud jewel in the green, glistening waters of the Gulf.

"A few weeks ago," Washburn confides, "I was sitting in my New York office thinking about that island. It wasn't doing anyone any good."

"Then I got to thinking about kids who were struggling to get married. What a tremendous burden a honeymoon must be in the budget of a $35-a-week clerk, I asked. If I could help me find kids who might like to honeymoon, without charge, on my island, I changed its name from Hog Island to Honeymoon Island."

They Didn't Believe Him

Immediately, letters began to pour in to New York and Tampa. "Is it a joke?" "What's the catch?" "Sounds too good to be true." "Miracles still happen." "I submit my application for June 15."

It's no joke and there's no string attached. Of course, Washburn is not totally unkind of the favorable publicity he and his island are getting. But he's doing what he had always longed to do: he's giving kids a break.

Thatched cottages are being put up on the island so that tents won't be necessary. Fresh water wells are being drilled, sanitation facilities provided. The couples will have to pay their transportation to Tampa and to bring the necessary food. If wife isn't a cook now, she will be after two weeks of Honeymoon Island. No other persons except honeymooners will be allowed on the island.

Divorce Lawyer is "Helpful"

Washburn is handling every letter personally. Here is the reply he sends to inquiries:

"The requirements are as follows: (1) Write a letter stating the time you wish to arrive, (2) furnish two references, (3) send a snapshot of you and the bride (groom) to-be, and (4) marriage certificates must not be over thirty days old."

"I am preparing small thatched roof cottages. All you will need to supply are your transportation and food. As you are my guest, there will be no cost for your stay."

"The letters are pouring in in a steady stream—as many from boys as from girls."

Business firms are donating needed material. Civic clubs are cooperating, part, wrote Washburn: "I will offer a Tampa lawyer, wanting to do his my service, free of charge, as attorney to the first Honeymoon Island couple that becomes dissatisfied with the matrimonial venture and wish to have the bonds severed."

President James Monroe was first buried in Marble Cemetery New York City, but was later interred in Hollywood Cemetery Richmond, Va.

To Assist Farmers in AAA Program

Series of Farm Meetings Planned By County Agent

To assist every Hempstead county farmer in securing the largest possible benefits and the most conservation through the 1940 AAA program, a individual farm plan sheet is being worked out for every farmer according to Oliver L. Adams, county agent.

Community meetings will be held within easy access of every farmer during the next few weeks at which personal assistance will be given every farmer.

The farm plan sheet will show the depleting allotment acreages, both general and special allotments; the general building payment per acre; the soil building allowance; and the maximum payment the farm may earn in 1940.

The farmer will be asked to furnish a plan of his cropping operations for 1940 listing his depleting and non-depleting crops; and the soil building practices he plans to establish during the year, so that, where advisable, adjustments might be made to permit maximum payments being earned.

Community meetings were held this week at Patmos and Springhill. Meetings announced for next week are: Guernsey on Monday afternoon, Beard Chapel all day Tuesday and at De Ann all day Thursday. Other communities will be announced soon.

Triple superphosphate fertilizer for pasture and meadows is available as a grant of aid this year as last. Applications are being taken now and the first orders should be received to be applied for growth value this year.

Reciprocal Trade Program Passed by House, 216 to 168

Would Extend Program for Another Three Years

IS DEMO VICTORY

All of Arkansas Delegation Vote in Favor of Measure

WASHINGTON —(AP)—The House gave the administration its first great victory of the session Friday night with a vote extending the reciprocal trade agreements program three years.

The resolution, passed 216 to 168, goes to the Senate, where the Finance Committee plans to begin hearings Monday, with Secretary Hull as its first witness.

The Republican leadership fought the legislation to the end, assisted by a scattering of Democratic members from farm and cattle sections. These members have been in rebellion against the program on the ground that tariff reductions under it have injured producers of their districts.

The vote was a personal triumph for Secretary Hull, and one which some thought might increase his prestige as a potential Democratic presidential nominee. Hull fought for such a program for years before he became secretary of state. Arguing that a revival of world trade depended principally on elimination of such trade barriers as high tariffs, he obtained congressional approval for a three-year trial of his policy in 1934. The time was extended three years in 1937.

Hull has negotiated agreements with more than a score of nations, which have reduced their tariffs in return for reductions in rates of the Smoot-Hawley law, enacted in 1930.

Vote for Program

Republicans came to the present session of congress resolved to end the policy. But, the anti-New Deal majority which held sway in the House at the close of the last session failed to materialize. Southern Democrats who on a number of past issues voted against the New Deal, stood with the administration on the tariff question. They were more than enough to offset the usually pro-New Deal Western Democrats and who deserted the administration in this instance. The seven Arkansas congressmen voted for the resolution.

Realizing some days ago the battle was lost, the opposition concentrated on amendments intended to place restrictions upon the program. The administration held command throughout a day of voting, and all proposals were rejected.

Amendment Rejected

An amendment offered by Representative Stowther (Rep., N. Y.) would have changed the program into the tariff system advocated by the Republican Platform Committee. He proposed a reciprocity system, but one under which all trade agreements

Germany Clamps Censorship Upon Visit of Welles

See Mussolini Monday, to Berlin on Wednesday

MANY SUBS SUNK

4 Unconfirmed Sinkings Reported by British

BERLIN, Germany — A tight official clamp was placed Saturday on all news of the pending visit of United States Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles to Germany.

Authorized German sources said Welles' visit would "take place entirely outside the press."

At the Vatican City in Rome usually well-informed sources said Pope Pius would receive Welles when he comes to Rome along with Myron C. Taylor.

The two are due to arrive in Rome Sunday. Welles is expected to see Mussolini Monday and leave Rome for Berlin Wednesday.

Nazi Subs Sunk

LONDON, Eng. —(AP)—Great Britain announced Saturday the sinking of the naval trawler Benvolio by a mine with the loss of 10 men, while press reports said four German submarines had been sunk by British aircraft.

Reports that the submarines had been sunk—three by Royal Air Force bombs and one through ramming by the British steamer Asiatic off the Shetland islands, were without official confirmation.

If true, German submarine losses reported by the British now total 50.

The sinking of the trawler was the 50 British navy loss of the war.

Employers Urged to Attend Meeting

Compensation Set-Up to Be Explained Tuesday Night

In view of the recent changes which have been made in the Unemployment Compensation set-up, indications are that the meeting to be held in the auditorium of the Hope city hall on the night of February 27 at 7:30 p. m. will be of much interest to employers and employees.

All employers and employees are urged to be present at this meeting as we are sure various points will be brought out by the speakers, which we are not aware of at this time.

Any person who has a question regarding the Unemployment Compensation Act, should feel free to bring it out and have it explained. The purpose of the meeting is to get a better understanding of the Unemployment Compensation Act and for that reason all interested persons are urged to be in attendance.

Leap Year? Heck, Every Year's Leap Year--Men Don't Know It

By RUTH MILLETT

On Leap Year women are granted the privilege of proposing. But it is a privilege they usurp the other three years out of four.

Not that most of them actually say anything like, "We've been going steady for a year, don't you think it's direct proposal. And though wives hate to admit it, most of them put the marrying bee in their husband's Tyrolean bonnets.

Fact is—some of them have admitted it to me.

One cute little brunette (she was a school teacher, and didn't like it) said that she burst into tears when a young man who had come to visit her was ready to get on the train. With one foot on the train steps and said, "Don't you cry, Baby. I'll come back and get you." And he did.

Another girl confessed she said "I love you" because she thought the man was afraid. Evidently he was—for once she said it, he screwed up enough courage to propose.

Still another admitted that her husband might never have reached the proposal stage—if she had not let him know that another persistent young man was making her life miserable because he wouldn't take "No" for an answer to his honorable intentions.

The Height of Confidence

Some girls even manage to get married without a proposal at all. Their calm child-like belief that a wedding inevitably follows romance just seems about time we got married!"

Such an honest statement of fact would shock and repulse most men. They just can't take it.

But they do take—and like—the in-

Ships of Tongue Plague Announcer

Science Explains Slips, But Can't Prevent 'Em

By JACK SINNETT
AL Feature Service Writer
When announcer Col. John J. Maguire recently introduced Governor Lehman of New York to radio audiences in 42 states with "Now ladies and gentlemen, may I introduce the governor of the great state of New York, Herbert H. Hoover," he was merely treading in the missteps of radio's greatest broadcasters.

There's hardly an announcer alive who hasn't fallen victim at some time to these slips or quips of the tongue that turn a perfectly harmless phrase into one of life's most embarrassing moments.

Chains and local stations even maintain schools for announcers in which much practice time is devoted to catching the tongue to wrap around the corners and then off with ease.

The name of former President Hoover, it seems, has tripped more than one. Many fans still remember when veteran broadcaster Harry Von Zell stepped up to the mike and with all humility said: "And now may I present the President of the United States, Robert Hoover."

True Story?
Ben Grauer was present at the microphone one night when a well-known actor contended his program with "Next week, I stink . . . a story—er, I mean I stink . . ."

Radio veterans say no advice and no amount of rehearsal can keep these occasional jewels from escaping the tongue. Psychologists, consulted by National Broadcasting Co. officials, say it results from a befuddled mental maze, a queer distortion and unbalancing of words and logic which the average professor may explain but cannot cure.

The veteran Grauer, for example, knows all the pitfalls but he still blunders over his most embarrassing moment when he called "the north compass station"—the north comfort station.

Season announcer Milton Cross, who has broadcast for NBC for more than 15 years, once called "The Prince of Pilsen" the "Pill of Princeton" and swears to this day that not even in the remote regions of his subconscious has he anything against the operetta or the New Jersey college.

Lady's Error
Many a serious broadcaster has gone before the microphone and made his listeners hawl with laughter that would be the envy of such poked-hardened roar-provokers as Jack Benny or Charlie McCarthy.

America Fought 'Unfinished War' Near Finn Arctic Battleground

By NEA Service
When news comes from Finland of battles above the Arctic Circle at 50 below, there are several thousand Americans who know all about that—veterans of an "unfinished war."

They are veterans of the American expeditionary force which arrived at Archangel in September, 1918. There were 4500 of them then, mostly Wisconsin and Michigan boys.

This strange adventure is little known. But the Americans who were there, fighting near the same territory where Russian and Finn now clash, are not likely to forget it. They had joined the army to fight Germans in France. They fought fighting Russians in Arctic Siberia. Many of them have never found out why.

For 19 months, through the whole of the winter of 1918-1919, these American boys huddled in huts, marched over the frozen tundra, fought and died in the dim violet light to Arctic winter.

Reasons for Arctic Campaign Are Obscure
For what? It is hard today to understand the causes behind the adventure.

In the early spring of 1918 it looked bad for the allies. The Germans were advancing in France, partly because Russia had dropped out of the war, releasing German divisions for the western front. Nobody knew what was going on in Russia, but it was widely believed that amid internal chaos the Germans were getting control of the whole country.

It was feared that they would seize Murmansk and Archangel on the Arctic Sea, and use them as submarine bases. From those ports railroads run southward to Petrograd and to the main line of the Trans-Siberian Railway. It was even feared that they would be able to recruit Russians in vast masses for the German army.

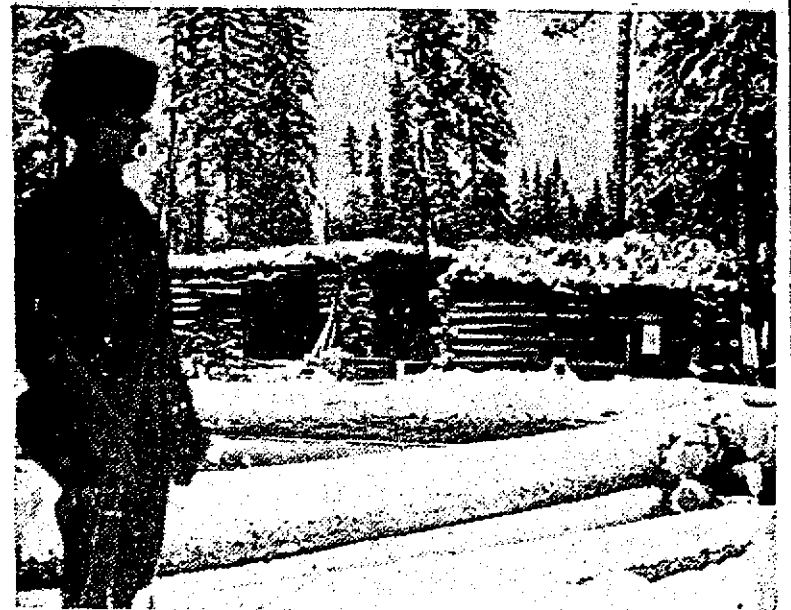

The British, at Trotsky's invitation, sent a small force to Murmansk to hold it against possible German seizure. By creating a "front" in north Russia, it was also hoped to prevent any Russian help for Germany.

The allies kept pestering the United States to send men to help. Pershing was dubious of it; Baker didn't like it, but the British sold the idea to President Wilson.

Ivan's Town Still Is Terrible
So in September the 339th Infantry, a battalion of engineers, a field hospital unit and an ambulance company under Lieut. Col. George E. Stewart piled off British transport at Archangel. That town had been founded by Ivan the Terrible, and to the American boys it still looked terrible.

They were installed in ratty old barracks abandoned by the Bolsheviks and turned over to Brig. Gen. F. C. Poole, commander of the British troops already occupying the town.

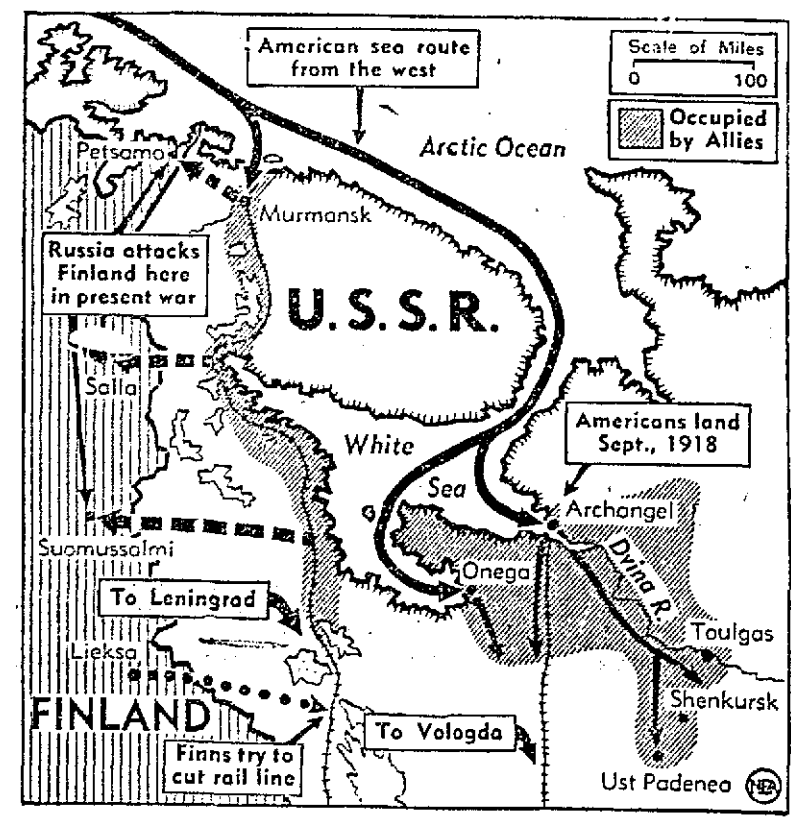

About 700 special railway troops were also sent to Murmansk the following April, to keep open the same southward rail line that the Finns had tried so desperately to cut during the present campaign.

Taking shelter from the Russian winter in log barracks, American troops in 1919 wore fur hats a la Finland, like this buck private at listening post.

It was 50 below zero when this American soldier was photographed before a blockade on the Vologda railroad front south of Archangel in February, 1919.

Americans once fought in the Arctic snows near scene of present Russo-Finnish war. Heavy black lines show where American troops campaigned during and after World War. Shading shows area of occupation. Dotted lines show nearby lines of conflict in today's war.

100 miles south of Archangel. The Armistice came in France on Nov. 11, but as the guns died on the Western Front, they blazed at Toulgas where part of the 339th, with a few Royal Scots and Canadian artillery men, were repelling desperate attacks by the gray-clad Red army.

A dozen little "front" with detachments of American troops stood off Red attacks, then dug in for the winter, building log blockhouses to repulse frequent attacks.

By spring the Americans were fed up with the whole thing. Then somebody back home remembered.

Earl Long Not To Contest Election

Will Not Be Candidate for Secretary of State

NEW ORLEANS —(AP)— Gov. Earl Long curtly told questioners here that he did not intend to contest the Democratic nomination of Sam Jones, Lake Charles lawyer who defeated him last Tuesday at the polls. The governor conferred with lieutenants in his smashed political machine here.

In a hoarse voice he gave the reporters this statement, his first since the primary:

"I don't owe the newspapers a damned thing. I wish the newspapers would leave me alone. I would like for you to use that as a statement from me. If I have anything to say I'll send it the Progress (administration newspaper) so they won't juggle it."

Most of the Louisiana newspapers opposed the election of the brother of the late Huey P. Long whose followers were unseated after 12 years in the political saddle. The official figures compiled by the secretary of state missing gave Jones a majority of 19,527 votes or 281,462 for Jones to 261,935 for Long.

Asked at his hotel whether he was seeking the office of secretary of state, the governor again replied briefly: "I'm not seeking anything."

Long has appointed E. A. Conway to fill the three months' unexpired term of Secretary of State E. A. Conway Sr., who died Monday, the day before election.

Conway was renominated for the four-year term over two opponents in the first primary and the Democratic State Committee will select the nominee in place of Conway. There is some question whether the incumbent committee has this power or whether the new one named Tuesday takes office now.

Fourth Quarter a Thriller
Quarter No. 4 had many of the fans standing in their seats. Goals by Baker and J. D. Jones gave the Bobcats a 36 to 31 lead at the outset of the quarter. Robert Carter and Ben Jones sank goals for the Badgers and the score was, 36 to 35, Hope. Marvin Smith's goal put Beebe ahead, 37 to 36. K. Smith counted a free throw for Hope and it was, 37 to 37.

Then M. Smith plunked in a free throw for Beebe and Badgers led, 38 to 37. The Badgers paced, 39 to 37, on Carter's free throw, at Norman Green's nifty goal from behind the foul line tied it, 39 to 39. With less than two minutes to go, J. D. Jones swished in another for the Bobcats and it was all Hope when Green tossed the final goal of the game.

Badgers Lose Mask
Rutherford Mask, Beebe forward, was ejected from the game because of four personal two minutes before the end. Coach Bro Erwin of the Badgers started ill. Badgers' starter, Elmer Purdie, usually a leading point-maker was off slightly. Joe Eason, too, was in there.

M. Smith and Carter Shine
Marvin Smith and Robert Carter turned in sterling brands for the Beebes. Marvin younger brother of Gaylon Smith of Southwestern and professional football fame, scored 12 points. Carter, Smith and Ben Jones all covered themselves with plenty of glory.

Recapitulations disclose that Hope registered 19 goals to 18 by Beebe. The Bobcats hooped five out of 12 free throws. The Badgers made good on three of six.

It would be contented such a requirement here would result in delay, he said, but that did not seem to matter to the proponents of the legislation when delay was caused by ratification in other countries. In some instances, he said effectiveness of the pacts had been delayed for 11 months by the ratification in other countries. In some instances, he said effectiveness of the pacts had been delayed for 11 months by the ratification in other countries.

Representative Dingell (Dem., Mich.) contended the amendment would result in "the death of the trade agreements" and said that that was "what the minority seeks at this time." He argued it would revive "log rolling." The amendment was voted down, 161 to 144.

Makes Better Showing

The opposition came much closer with an amendment by Representative Disney (Dem., Okla.) to forbid any reduction in excise duties on oil, coal, copper and lumber. Since all these commodities were included in the proposal attracted the support of numerous members from sections which produce each.

Disney declared previous reductions in excise taxes under the trade agreements had no basis in law, and had been a "breach of faith" by the State Department. "If you turn down this amendment," he said, "it is a mandate to the State Department to do anything it wishes to the excise taxes."

Other amendments rejected included one by Representative Coffey (Dem., Neb.) to require Senate ratification of the pacts, in the manner usual to treaties one by Representative Woodruff (Rep., Mich.) to prevent reductions in tariffs on any farm product the price of which is below parity, and one by Crowthier to provide a system of judicial review of the rate reductions at the instance of persons who might feel themselves injured.

The opposition made its final effort with a motion to send the bill back to the Ways and Means Committee with instructions to include four amendments which had been voted down. Opposition leaders apparently hoped that in bulk these proposals would attract enough votes to put them over. The motion was defeated, 221 to 163.

Pig Plenty Prevails in Switzerland

BERNE —(AP)—Switzerland has won the battle of the pigs.

Several years ago the Federal authorities began a campaign to encourage farmers to raise enough pigs to meet the requirements of the landlocked confederation.

Recently the Federal Statistical Bureau published the results of a nationwide pig census showing that there are now 1,120,000 pigs in Switzerland compared to little more than a million in 1937. National requirements are 1,050,000 each year. Switzerland imports no more pigs.
